Airlines

Coordinate seats, fares and reservations for scheduled and charter flights. Give direct customers and travel agencies a way to book the inventory you release to them.

Prepare the flight for sale

Define schedules, seat allotments and fare classes for the flights you plan to sell.

Open availability by channel

Decide which seats and fares go to direct booking and which are made available to agency partners.

Manage changes after booking

Review the reservation when a traveller needs a change, cancellation or refund.

Example workflow

A charter team sets aside seats for agency partners and makes the remaining seats available through its direct booking channel. The reservation team then uses the booking record to manage changes.

Departure → Seat allocation → Fare selection → Channel release → Reservation → Servicing and reporting

Seat planners can explain the split between agency allotments and direct availability, and service teams can identify the booking affected by a later change.
